Personal Independence Payment Yearly update

Dear Mr Okpala

The rates of Personal Independence Payment (PIP) are looked at every year and any changes will take place from 7 April 2025.

What this means for you

Your current total weekly amount is £184.30.

The rates of PIP have been looked at and the amounts have changed.

Your new total weekly amount is £187.45 from 7 April 2025.

How this amount is made up

The new daily living amount is £110.40.

The new mobility amount is £77.05.

We may pay you less than your weekly amount if your payment is affected by other benefits, for example; you have a Motability agreement or you are paying money back to us.

The first payment covering the 7 April 2025 could be made up of your new and old amounts.

Yours sincerely

Office Manager

If there is a change to your daily living or mobility needs you must let us know straightaway.

DELAY , DENIAL , = entrapment {

entrapment layer

model of github.com/obinexus/dgt-dimension-game-theory

i need a house waste time system not working excuse you forget to do this denial it your fault it was his fault you waste your time you don't care fine i don't have your time

DEFEND — since you missed the deal set hear go here isn't pay for a private house go to other council get a job to fix your problem we are not public we are private council under this article reason it is not our fault at all

DEFERENTIAL — since we can't do a, b, c go to d find another way you are banned not welcome

Red pill/wine

i take the bait not know my right to housing i don't check public housing act 18–25 free house under 18–20, 20–23, 23–25 housing act health and social care act 2012 act is article under health and social care for free independent housing

if i take road pull if i am ignorant don't know of do housing act i get red pill red wind i don't know my rights to public service blue pill/wine :

he/she want a house but they don't know it free under the Health and Social Care Act of 2014
date mandated by law

The governor or council officer then don't call down tell me my right to a free housing service the stay silent for maximum profit into a broken system for profit

Introduction: Flip the Narrative

When people hear “entrapment,” they think of hidden cameras and undercover police. But we need to change that. Entrapment isn't just a courtroom defence — it's a reality disabled and vulnerable people live every single day.

You're told you're not homeless.

You're told your care is “sufficient.”

You're told you're “free to leave” — while every door is locked.

That's not care. That's calculated delay.

That's Entrapment by Improbability.

And it's time we flip the narrative. Use it. Document it. Prove it.

Because entrapment is a system — and systems leave trails.

Tick, tap! The clock's hand crawls towards midnight.
Tock, tap! I tap my pen against the till, impatient in the crowd.
A voice guides me, a soulless song further darkens the night.

Tick, tap! Waiting for the last of the crowd to leave,
I mutter, frustrated, sighing, disengaged.

Tick, tock! "Midnight, at last!" I cry with excitement.
Grappling for my native attire, I race to catch the night's final glimmer.
Exiting, locking the shop with desperation.

Sunlight kisses my skin, waking my body.
"Ya! Cha-Cha-Cha — Kwenu!" chant the people, waking my soul.
"Ya! Cha-Cha-Cha — Kwezuonu!" I scream back.
Tumbling, twisting, I transform into the majestic masquerade.

One with the chant, I dance, spinning with the wind's intricacy.
One with the people, children's laughter ignites a fire in my soul, warmth in my heart.

Twirling in a vibrant array of colours, I lift dust into the air.
I am caught by every lens, preserving my spirit from every angle.
Uplifted by curious children, I breathe new flames into their souls, Filling them with awe, breathing new life into their eyes.

"Whoa, Wow, Ahh!" they scream in excitement.
Their joy fills the air, and they shower me with native gifts.
Chased by their voices echoing in broad daylight — "GINI? BIA!"

Moving with grace and precision,
I am admired, adorned, a living treasure of tradition.
Never in spite, never lacking spirit —
I am fuelled by culture, heritage, and time-honoured tradition.
I am timeless, energized by our values.

Adored by the crowd, celebrated by the children, I give life to culture.
Always masquerading within the crowd, for what is young and yet to be, I became.

Now go, tell the tales that gave me life.
Do not let our history fall and fade — forgotten, lost.
Instead, cherish it, rejoice in it, and share it with open hearts.

Now, GO! Pass it on, from one generation to the next.
With the spirit of the Masquerade, we belong — together.
